IN LINE WITH AFP TRANSFORMATION ROADMAP, ISO CERTIFICATION

AFPPS starts 2015 with new electronic information management system

The AFP Procurement Service (AFPPS) is literally starting 2015 with a bang with its parallel testing of the Procurement Information Management System (PIMS), an electronic monitoring and information system project, in two of its units based at Camp General Emilio Aguinaldo and Fort San Felipe, Cavite City on the first week of January.

Col Alvin Francis A Javier PA (GSC), Commander of AFPPS, said that the system will be tested initially with 302nd Contracting

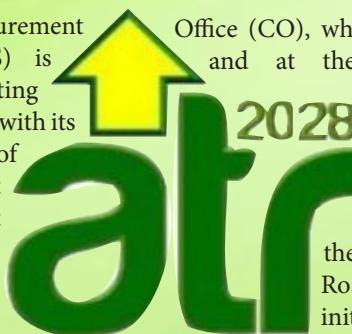

Office (CO), which developed the project, and at the General Headquarters Procurement Center (GHQPC).

He stressed that the development of the system is in line with the AFP Transformation Roadmap and the AFPPS' initiatives towards ISO 9001:2008 Certification.

If proven effective and responsive, the system will be used in all Procurement Centers (PCs) and Contracting Offices (COs) nationwide.

UPDATE ON ISO CERTIFICATION INITIATIVES

AFPPS undergoes Management Review

Inching closer to ISO 9001:2008 Certification, the AFP Procurement Service conducted Management Review –the third to the last three major activities towards the Service's goal to finally be certified as ISO 9001:2008 compliant.

In his report to AFP Chief of Staff Gen Gregorio Pio Catapang Jr, AFPPS Commander Col Alvin Francis A Javier PA (GSC) stated that the Service has already accomplished 85 percent of the scheduled activities for certification.

The Management Review –which will be followed by Final Preparation for Certification and the Third Party Certification, was held last November 28.

Col Javier said that the Service is targeting to execute all the scheduled activities by end of January 2015 as it aims to obtain ISO 9001:2008 Certification by March.

"We have worked so hard to come this far, and now that we are closer to achieving our certification, I urge everybody to perform their respective tasks and be part of our journey towards ISO 9001:2008," Col Javier tells AFPPS personnel. Turn to page 10

COL ALVIN FRANCIS A JAVIER PA (GSC)

There is no better way to start 2015 than to introduce and test the effectiveness of our electronic monitoring and information system which was developed by our very own 302nd Contracting Office (CO) – my congratulations to the dedicated men and women of this unit.

In 2014, I can say that we delivered what was expected of the Service and more –we took the initiatives toward ISO 9001:2008 Certification and we recorded huge amount of residuals in favor of the government.

Together, we have taken the initial steps toward ISO 9001:2008 compliance and now the Service is moving closer to achieving the certification in compliance to the AFP Transformation Roadmap and to His Excellency President Benigno C Aquino III's "daang matuwid."

And through our collective efforts, we have registered residuals –thus maximizing and extending our resources, without sacrificing delivery of quality supplies to catered units.

There is no better way to start 2015 than to introduce and test the effectiveness of our electronic monitoring and information system which was developed by our very own 302nd Contracting Office (CO) – my congratulations to the dedicated men and women of this unit.

With this system, we can push further our way to ISO 9001:2008 Certification.

This move will definitely lead us to a more efficient and responsive Procurement Service –able to deliver necessary supplies and services to military field units on time.

So, I ask everybody at AFPPS to sustain the gains we have in 2014 and go for the best this 2015!
